Splenectomy

TPLO ACL Repair

Laparoscopic Procedures

TPLO

One of our most common procedures performed in our surgical suite is the Tibial Plateau Leveling Osteotomy. This orthopedic surgery has been performed by Dr. Kamer for over 20 years. This procedure is used to repair a ruptured cranial ligament commonly called a dog's ACL. When a dog tears its ACL, every time the dogs goes to stand or put weight on the leg, the femur slides/rubs on the back of the tibia. This rubbing causes pain and inflammation, which is very uncomfortable. This is why most dogs with a torn ACL will not even put any weight on the leg, or if they do, they will just toe touch the leg to the ground. Dr. Kamer requires a consultation for all potential orthopedic surgeries, to take his own x-rays ,assess the situation and go over the operation with the owners. He takes the time to go over every aspect of the surgery , what to expect afterward and what steps need to be taken for recovery. He also includes post operative recheck appointments just to ensure that the surgery was successful and things are healing as they should.
